OFF-CAMPUS, by Tim Knisely

20 Years of Victims: and the battle goes on

This summer I will be completing my 20th year as a fire code inspector, fire safety advocate and instructor promoting fire safety in campus communities across the U.S. During this time there have been many successes and saves, as well as a lot of extremely good luck as we try to protect students that live both on- and off-campus. Unfortunately, there have been too many tragedies that have wrecked families and friendships by taking fire victims while they ...

WHAT’S COOKIN’? FIRE SAFETY REGULATIONS FOR FOOD TRUCKS
By: Jacqueline Wilmot

SECTION 510 EMERGENCY RESPONDER RADIO COVERAGE
When most of us think about food trucks, we tend to have an image of an old greasy "roach coach" as we use to call them, burned in the back of our minds. However, the resurgence of food trucks in recent years is replacing that outdated image with a new picture that illustrates the trend of gourmet food trucks that provide healthy alternatives and fresh fusion cuisine at affordable prices. As the popularity of food trucks continues to grow, jurisdictions all over the globe are asking

Creating a 360 Campus Fire and Life Safety Inspection Program,
By: David G. Taylor; Associate Director of Life and Fire Safety Services, Gettysburg College

Campus Fire & Life Safety Professionals (CFLCP) need to develop a fire and life safety fire prevention inspection program of every facility on campus to include residential living areas. A Risk Assessment is identifying, analyzing, and weighing all the potential risks, threats and hazards to an institution internal and external environment. A fire and life safety prevention inspection program will address many of those risks and discover if a group of people or a facility is vulnerable to a fire event or life safety hazard. It allows the institution or local community to document what mitigating actions have been taken to manage these risks. Using the SWOT will help develop a good inspection program.
